achieving the theoretical goal. Our study showed, however, that this aspect is notably impaired in fear of loudness. Moreover, on a more specific level, the detection of a frequency shift reveals the capacity to assess the dynamic properties of an audiometric signal. It should be noted that this capacity was shown to be impaired in participants with fear of loudness, regardless of age. We are aware that findings pertaining to age should be viewed with some caution given the limited sample size. Nevertheless, it is worth noting that our sample comprised younger participants with a higher age range than
